Want to play along? Here's how:

- The Busy Bee (just like the graphic shown here) is hidden inside one of the ads in each issue.
- When you find it, email us at findthebee@ busybeetrader.com with your name and the location where you picked up your copy.

A FACTORY REBORN

How Sturgis Antique Mall Wove Its Own Second Story

In the small town of Sturgis, Kentucky, a once-bustling pants factory has been given a second life — one filled not with fabric and thread, but with antiques, artistry and heart. The Sturgis Antique Mall has become a regional destination for collectors and casual shoppers alike, offering 23,000 square feet of history, craftsmanship and small-town charm under one roof.

Owner Teresa T. Holeman never imagined her childhood fascination with “junk” would one day become a full-time passion. Growing up in rural northern Indiana, she found beauty in the overlooked and forgotten, treasures tucked away in barns, chicken coops and basements. That early curiosity, paired with the knowledge passed down from her antique-loving mother-in-law, became the foundation for what would later become Sturgis Antique Mall.

When the opportunity arose in 2010 to purchase the former pants factory — at that time a drafty, open-air building operated by the local Chamber of Commerce — Teresa saw more than a challenge. She saw potential. “I put together everything I liked and disliked in all the malls I had been in previously,” she says. “I wanted to make it the best mall ever.”

She transformed the space from top to bottom: adding individual electrical outlets in every booth, bright new lighting, pegboard walls, wider aisles for accessibility, modern bathrooms and a brand-new roof, all finished with the mall’s signature red exterior. Today, with 110 booths and 50 showcases, the building hums once again with energy, laughter and discovery.

Behind the success of Sturgis Antique Mall is a team as remarkable as the treasures they sell. Teresa credits much of the mall’s longevity to her loyal crew, people who have become like family. Lisa Jones, hired from the very beginning, quickly grew from bookkeeper to manager, keeping the business running smoothly and the dealers thriving. Her daughter-in-law, Kaley Jones, leads the mall’s marketing efforts, breathing new life into its online presence with daily posts, photos and quick replies to curious shoppers.

The team also includes Mike Cowan, who has been part of the journey for all fifteen years, known for fixing just about anything and keeping the mood light. Mary Greenwell, along with Kaley, keeps the mall looking fresh by creating beautiful displays that could grace the cover of a magazine. Larry and Kathy Thompson and Tanya Newcom handle clerking duties, help manage booths and maintain their own vendor spaces — proof that this crew truly lives and breathes the world of antiques. And behind the scenes, Darell Jones, a retired electrician, ensures that every light continues to shine bright.

Although Teresa now resides in Charleston to be closer to her grandchildren, her heart remains in Sturgis. “I’ve been truly blessed to have such wonderful people behind me,” she says. “They’ve helped me achieve my dream as a mall owner and keep it running in my absence.”

This December, as shoppers search for gifts that carry meaning and history, the Sturgis Antique Mall offers a perfect escape from the ordinary. Visitors will find vintage furniture, timeless décor, collectible treasures and handcrafted items, each with its own story to tell. Whether you’re looking for a unique present or simply a cozy place to spend a winter afternoon, the mall’s welcoming atmosphere and dedicated team make it well worth the visit.

In a town that once stitched together pants for the working world, a different kind of craftsmanship now thrives. The Sturgis Antique Mall continues to sew together community, creativity and connection — one booth, one memory and one beautiful find at a time.

LETTER FROM THE PUBLISHERS

The Christmas season always makes me reflect on my mom's remarkable ability to make the holidays feel truly magical. Our home sparkled with festive décor in every corner, the scent of wassail filled the kitchen and the traditions we followed year after year brought such warmth—especially our family favorite, baking and decorating gingerbread houses together. On Christmas Eve, we always began the night with my dad reading Luke 2, a quiet reminder of the meaning behind all that joy.

That sense of magic and tradition feels much the same when I walk into the shops featured in this month's issue. Each one has poured heart and creativity into transforming their spaces for the season—offering cozy displays, thoughtful gift ideas and festive events that capture the wonder of Christmas. Whether it's the beautiful charm of Sweet Maple Vintage, Gifts, and Home Décor or the holiday spirit at Four Sisters Antiques and Vintage, these retailers work tirelessly to bring that same feeling of nostalgia and delight to their customers.

This issue celebrates that spirit with A Very Vintage Christmas, a look at timeless holiday décor, along with our features on Sturgis Antique Mall, Sissy's Antiques & Interiors and Antique Center I & II. You'll also find a few recipes sure to fill your kitchen with the scents of the season—like Gingerbread, Eggnog and a cozy family favorite of ours, Chicken Noodle Soup.

And I have to say, Terry Lea's For the Love of Vintage Gifts might be one of my favorite reads of the year. Her thoughtful ideas have already inspired me to start planning my own Christmas gift list with more intention and creativity. I think her words will do the same for you.

From both of us, we wish you a joyful holiday season filled with warmth, wonder and old-fashioned magic.

Merry Christmas!

FOR THE LOVE OF VINTAGE GIFTS

by Terry Lea, Murfreesboro, Tennessee

Tis the season for gift-giving. The spirit of generosity tends to grow exponentially in December; even Ebenezer Scrooge and the Grinch discovered the joy in bestowing gifts on others.

And if ever there was a reason to wax nostalgic, the holidays are it—whether we’re fondly reminiscing over our own childhood memories of trees and gifts and lights and cookies, or if we’re romanticizing the holiday traditions of a few centuries ago.

When it comes to gift-giving, there are a few schools of thought: is the newest and shiniest always best? Or are you a vintage treasure hunter, seeking out the antique, unique gift that no one else would think of?

In the antiques and vintage world, we’re more in the camp of “old and rare” versus “new and trendy,” and that applies to gifts as well as items for our own homes.

Buying vintage and antiques can be easy—or challenging. Hunting up the perfect vintage gift can take time and patience, unless you’re willing to acquire rare, first-edition items and pay the premium they command. If you’re on a more modest budget, that will also factor into the amount of time it takes to find the perfect thing—you may have to scour antique and vintage stores, flea markets, estate sales and thrift stores to find what you’re looking for. But the thrill of the hunt is more than half the fun, isn’t it?

How to shop for vintage gifts?

The first step is to know the recipient—what do they love? Do they have a collection? Do they want a larger collection? Are they a new collector, happy to add a piece or two? Or are they a more discriminating connoisseur, looking for a “holy grail” items to finish their collection?

If their collection is on full display, take mental notes (or sneak some photos) so you know what they already have.

Once you’ve done your “recon” work, you’ll be able to start the hunt. Keep your eyes and mind open to potential gifts that may be a little outside their passion. Here are some examples to get you started:

- An antique camera lover may also be intrigued by an old leather camera bag or a rack for drying darkroom plates.
- Your cook or baker is sure to love a first-edition of their beloved cookbook, or perhaps a vintage apron or antique rolling pin.
- A favorite fisherman will appreciate the beauty of an older tackle box, especially if it’s in like-new condition. Or maybe you’ll luck upon some antique lures or a great casting reel.

- A Depression glass collector may swoon over some fabulous vintage napkins and napkin rings to coordinate with their collection.

- If you know someone who loves antique perfume bottles, find a vintage atomizer or vanity mirror to showcase their collection.

- A thimble collector may enjoy a vintage shadowbox to hold their favorites.

- A houseplant lover who has a treasure trove of cachepots and vintage planters would probably love an antique plant stand to hold some of their beauties.

Other timeless classics include barware, vintage jewelry and handstitched quilts.

If you’re crafty, this is your chance to unleash your creativity. Have someone on your list who loves antique dishes? Make them a wreath with small assorted antique plates, butter pats or cups. If they love antique books or music, look for ways to take a damaged book or piece of sheet music and turn it into art they can enjoy—especially if it happens to be one of their favorite titles or authors.

How to present a vintage present?

If you’ve gone to the trouble to find the perfect vintage or antique gift, give it the presentation it deserves. Forget the gift bag route for most vintage items—they deserve a little extra packaging and pizzazz.

Make sure to package any fragile or breakable items carefully in a box. This time of year, it’s easy to find tissue paper that looks vintage or antique. Nestle everything in the box with plenty of padding and make sure it doesn’t rattle before you wrap it up. If your gift happens to be wearable, vintage clothing can be hand-laundered and pressed or professionally cleaned before gifting.

You can take your gift to the next level by tucking it in a unique box: look for an old wood cheese box or hat box, a basket (especially one with a lid) or a vintage case. Find some traditional or retro ribbon to “gussy it up” and make it extra-special.

Giving a vintage or antique item isn’t about buying a “used” item; it’s about hunting for the unique things that aren’t being made anymore. A vintage gift says you care enough to know the recipient well enough to find them a rare treasure among the clutter and chaos of mass-produced goods.

WHAT'S THE BUZZ ABOUT BEES?

by Shannon Ingram, Cleveland, Tennessee

December marks the beginning of winter. The hive has only the queen and female worker bees left to survive the cold winter months. The drones have all gone. The queen will lay new drone eggs when they are needed in the spring.

The worker bees will work to keep the hive clean and the queen warm. The queen won't lay very many eggs, just enough to ensure the colony survives until spring. They will survive by eating the honey they stored and drinking water from the condensation created on the walls of the hive.

If the beekeepers realize they stood too much honey, they will add some sugar for the bees to eat through the winter.

Honeybees do not hibernate; they cluster in a ball to keep warm. Flapping their wings generates enough heat to keep the cluster around 90 degrees. On warm winter days, they will leave the hive to do cleansing flights. Bees will not poop in the hive! You will know if you have bees around in the winter, because you find your car covered in brown specs on a warm winter day.

The Lazy Elk Apiary Fun Honey Bee Facts!

Bee Basics

Bees live in hives—sometimes called colonies—with up to 60,000 bees! Each hive has one queen, hundreds of drones (boy bee), and thousands of worker bees (girl bees). Worker bees do all the jobs—cleaning feeding baby bees, guarding the hive, and collecting nectar.

Flower Power

Bees visit about 100 flowers a day just to make a little While collecting nectar, they spread pollen, helping plants grow fruit and seeds—like apples, blueberries, and cucumbers! Without bees, many of our favorite foods wouldn't grow.

Meet the Queen

The queen bee lays up to 2,000 eggs a day. She can live for 3–5 years, much longer than worker bees. Every hive smells like its queen—each queen has her own special scent.

Be Kind to Bees

Plant flowers like sunflowers, lavender, and clover to help them thrive. Avoid using pesticides—they can harm bees and their food sources.

Busy Bee Superpowers

Bees communicate by dancing! The "waggle dance" tells others where flowers are. They flap their wings about 200 times per second, which makes their buzzing sound.

TREND & TRADITION

A Very Vintage Christmas: Holiday Decor with History

Each month in “Trend & Tradition,” we explore the styles making a comeback—or sticking around for good—in the world of antique and vintage décor. Whether it’s a classic piece getting a modern twist or a fresh way to style a timeworn favorite, we’ll show you how old and new can live beautifully together.

This season, Christmas decorating is taking a nostalgic turn. Across showrooms and social media alike, vintage ornaments, heirloom collections and antique touches are bringing old-world charm back to the holidays. Designers are calling it the year of nostalgia, a time when tradition and craftsmanship are front and center once again.

So Why Vintage Christmas Decor?

After years of sleek minimalism, decorators are craving warmth and sentiment. From mid-century ceramic trees to mercury glass ornaments, the trend blends classic holiday glamour with personal history. Vintage pieces add texture, authenticity and a sense of continuity... something that new decorations can only imitate.

This return to “decor with roots” fits right in with today’s sustainable mindset too. Reusing family heirlooms or secondhand treasures is both eco-friendly and stylish, making every ornament feel like part of a story worth keeping.

What to Look for While You Shop

As you browse antique malls or vendor markets this holiday season, keep an eye out for timeless treasures that fit this year’s look:

- Mercury glass ornaments in silver, gold or jewel tones
- Mid-century ceramic trees or aluminum tinsel trees
- Handmade or European glass ornaments (especially from Germany or Poland)

The Corydon Extravaganza

Accents & Antiques

Water Valley Flea Market

Four Sisters

- Brass or pewter candlesticks and candelabras
- Vintage linens with embroidery or lace edging
- Old toy trains, sleigh bells, sleds or wooden nutcrackers for nostalgic accents

Don’t worry if a piece shows its age, small chips or patina often add character and charm.

Easy Ways to Bring the Look Home

Want to try the vintage Christmas trend without a full overhaul? Start small with a few key pieces that layer beautifully with modern decor:

- Decorate a tabletop tree entirely with vintage glass ornaments.
- Mix antique candlesticks with newer garlands or greenery.
- Use a silver serving tray or crystal bowl as a candle base or ornament display.
- Repurpose old tins, crocks or ironstone for gift displays or floral arrangements.
- Add texture with vintage linens: tea towels, doilies or lace runners.

The key is balance: a few thoughtfully chosen vintage pieces can make an ordinary space feel rich with history and style.

Where to Hunt

Busy Bee Trader advertisers are full of seasonal inspiration right now. Look for booths featuring antique ornaments, festive tableware and old-world holiday displays. Estate sales, thrift stores and local vendor markets are also great hunting grounds this time of year, especially for classic ornaments and collectibles that only come out for the season.

This Christmas create a holiday look that feels uniquely your own—rooted in the past, yet perfectly at home in the present. After all, trends may come and go, but the glow of nostalgia never fades.

GOOSE CHIC: THE YEAR'S CUTEST CRAZE

If you've noticed a few well-dressed geese hanging out on porches lately, you're not imagining things – the porch goose has made a grand return, and this time it's got a whole wardrobe to prove it.

What started as a nostalgic nod to the ceramic or plastic geese of decades past has turned into one of the most delightfully unexpected décor trends of the year. From cozy winter scarves to Santa suits and tiny Christmas sweaters, these fashionable fowl are becoming part of the family – proudly greeting guests and spreading cheer from front steps everywhere.

At Grit & Grace Market, the craze has truly taken flight. Shoppers have been scooping up porch geese, extra outfits and even mini “desk geese” for their offices or shelves. And the fun doesn't stop there – apparel, prints and vintage finds featuring dressed-up geese are flying off the shelves, too.

There's just something irresistible about a goose in a seasonal outfit. Maybe it's the cheerful absurdity, or maybe it's the comforting nostalgia – either way, this quirky classic has found a new generation of fans.

This trend proves one thing: sometimes the sweetest décor doesn't take itself too seriously. After all, what's not to love about a little Goose Chic?
